

T. Groppi – V. Piergigli – A. Rinella (a cura di), Asian Constitutionalism in Transition. A Comparative Perspective, Giuffrè, Milano, 2008

Since the 1990s, many processes of democratization have taken place in various parts of the world. However, while those in Eastern Europe and Africa have been thoroughly analyzed, less attention has been paid to those involving Asian countries. This is even more true in Italy, where Asian law has been almost exclusively addressed by Private and Commercial law scholars. Instead, Constitutional law plays a fundamental role in shaping the legal culture and the systems of government and represents the precondition to master more specific fields of law. This volume would like to fill the gap, by drawing the attention on the constitutional developments and changes which have recently involved Eastern Asia countries.

INDICE

Part I

METHODOLOGICAL PROBLEMS

Tania Groppi, Does Asia Exist?

Andrew Harding, Asian Law, Public Law, Comparative Law Stir-Fry: Theory and Method Considered

Part II

DEMOCRATIC TRANSITIONS AND RULE OF LAW CONTRIBUTIONS

Per Bergling, Constitutionalism, State-Building and the Use of Force: Notes from Cambodia, Timor Leste and Afghanistan

Peter Leyland, Constitutional Design and the Quest for Good Governance in Thailand

Luca Mezzetti, Constitutional Transitions and Democratic Consolidation in Asia at the Beginning of the XXI Century

Angelo Rinella, Law-making in the People's Republic of China. The 'Obliquity' of the Chinese Constitutional System Between Rule of Law and Pragmatism

PAPERS

Elisa Bertolini, Japan: Linguistic Transitions as a Condition for the introduction of a Western Legal System

Núria González Campaña, Japanese International Cooperation: Good Governance Projects in South-East Asian Countries

Jose Maria Castellá-Andreu, Normalizing Japan: The Attempts to Amend the Constitution

Elena Consiglio, The Review Power of the Chinese Supreme People's Court on Death Sentences

Massimo Fragassi, 'We the Nepalese People': The Constitutional Transition in Nepal

Alessio Pecorario, Thailand's Dangerous Coup and Asian Juristocracy: Involution or Evolution?

Eva Pfössl, Caste, Gender and Minority Claims to Representation in India

Valeria Piergigli, Transition to Democracy and the Protection of Fundamental Rights: The Problematic Experience of Cambodia

Part III

ECONOMIC TRANSITION BETWEEN MARKET AND RIGHTS CONTRIBUTIONS

Gianmaria Ajani, Legal Change and Economic Performance: An Assessment

John Ohnesorge, Northeast Asia's Developmental States and the Problem of Rights: Challenges for a New Developmental State?

Raul C. Pangalangan, Constitutionalizing Redistributive Justice and Redefining the Public

Sphere: the Philippines' Post-Marcos Constitution

Marina Timoteo, Economic Development and Property Rights in China

PAPERS

Andrea De Petris, Free Market without Free Speech? Open Economy and Censored Digital Liberties in China

Alessandro Palmieri, The Modernization of Tort Law In China: Models and Perspectives

CONCLUSION

Giuseppe de Vergottini, Asian Constitutionalism: The Limits of the Western Model